

From: JDarrjr@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/24/02 10:32am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

TO: DOJ Government Officials

This latest lawsuit by AOL against Microsoft is such a sham, and should be thrown out immediately it appears that AOL is probably just trying to recoup their initial purchase of Netscape (which I think was a mistake in the first place).

Microsoft continues to do more for the software world (both for PC and MAC) than any other company in the world. Try to imagine where we would be in computer technology today if it hadn't been for Microsoft clearly the Apple Corp (MAC) hasn't made the giant-steps that have brought us to our highly technical position - only Microsoft.

I currently have AOL as my ISP (Internet Service Provider), but after this new lawsuit was filed I can no longer continue using them, and will get another ISP within the month. AOL may be the largest ISP, but their level of service continues to deteriorate and there is very lousy customer support or attempts to speed things up.

I'm sure the current Administration has some very conservative opinions about this lawsuit, and it should be dismissed !!

sincerely, John Darr